Amalgi Coast?

Cliff-hanger town, Bonifacio plays chance with the relentless sea, which forever gnaws at its limestone foundations (left). Grottoes cut by the waves rival Capri's. The town, retaining much of its medieval character, guards the strait between Corsica and Sardinia. A narrow street (below) that once reverberated with the clank of soldiers' armor echoes now with the clatter of a bread cart as a baker's boy makes a delivery.
